

Four companies - Lallemmand (Lalvin), Red Star, White Labs, and Wyeast - produce the vast majority of wine-yeast used by home wine makers in North America. Here's an up-to-date overview of the yeast strains these firms sell in small packages intended for home hobbyists, which is generally five grams for dry yeast packets and 35 to 175 ml for liquid vials or packets. There are other companies and strains, but these are the most common you can find at winemaking stores.
